

WANTED

- * A government that does not give their MNAs a 30% salary increase in one year, while the average salary for school support workers is $24,000 and 12% of them have visited food banks in the last year
- * A government that puts schools and the support staff who work there at the heart of its priorities rather than giving billions to private companies
- * A government that wants to solve the problems of attraction and retention in public services
- * A government that really negotiates

WANTED

- * A government that does not give their MNAs a 30% salary increase in one year, while the average salary for school support workers is $24,000 and 12% of them have visited food banks in the last year
- * A government that puts schools and the support staff who work there at the heart of its priorities rather than giving billions to private companies
- * A government that wants to solve the problems of attraction and retention in public services
- * A government that really negotiates

Since the beginning of public sector negotiations,
we, the school support staff,
have faced a government that laughs in our faces while proposing significant setbacks to our already difficult working conditions.

But nothing to fix the labour problems in the public services!

If you were in our shoes, what would you do to make the government listen to reason and ensure quality school support services for children?

You would resort to a strike.

This government leaves us with no other choice.

School daycare, special education, maintenance, cafeteria, administrative and technical support staff workers

On The Right Side

The side of
SCHOOL SUPPORT STAFF

Since the beginning of public sector negotiations,
we, the school support staff,
have faced a government that laughs in our faces while proposing significant setbacks to our already difficult working conditions.

But nothing to fix the labour problems in the public services!

If you were in our shoes, what would you do to make the government listen to reason and ensure quality school support services for children?

You would resort to a strike.

This government leaves us with no other choice.

School daycare, special education, maintenance, cafeteria, administrative and technical support staff workers

On The Right Side

The side of
SCHOOL SUPPORT STAFF

